

ROSSI TAKE-DOWN GALLERY GUN, This little Rossi rifle is a perfectly engineered copy of the Winchester Gallery Gun that was so popular at the turn of the century. Back when real rifles were used at Open-Air Fairs, these gallery guns were loaded with .22short and used by kids to target shoot out in public! Also a firm favorite with Scouts as a rifle to teach youngster how to shoot. Different days...Not to be trivialized, the magazine holds 10 rounds and the rifle can be slam-fired rapidly if the situation demands it! The rifle was also very popular as a "back-pack, survival" gun as it can be broken down into two parts with the turn of a screw and stored compact behind a Bakkie seat or inside a 3-Day Go Bag. Add a brick of .22 subsonic and stay out in the woods for a year! This particular example is in extremely good condition, with only a slight bit of bluing wear to working parts and the wood still in mint condition. Practically brand new!
